Technology has become an important part of our daily lives. It has changed our lives a lot. In many ways, it makes life more comfortable for us: we can send messages quickly through the Internet, cook meals in a few minutes in a microwave, and book train tickets online instead of walking to the station. However, in our increasingly technology-driven world, have we become addicted to technology?

Not very long ago, many children enjoyed reading a good book in their free time. Nowadays, many young people prefer playing video games or watching television. Some people even say they can't go without watching their favorite TV program, or without having access to the Internet.

Similarly, sending letters has become a thing of the past. It has been replaced by email, instant messaging and social media. However, the existence of social media has, in some ways, turned us into anti-social beings. Instead of hanging out with friends and seeing them face-to-face, we now spend a lot of time communicating online. Although online communication enables us to keep in touch with loved ones in different countries, we shouldn't forget the value of real-life human communication. It is, after all, in our nature to socialize with others!
