L. Read the passage and answer the following questions :

It won't surprise people to learn that doing exercise does more than raise the heartbeat. It lifts the spirit and builds confidence. But many brain researchers believe that something else happens, too. Just as exercise makes the bones, muscles, heart, and lungs stronger, researchers think that it also strengthens important parts of the brain.

Research suggests that doing exercise helps you learn new things and remember old information better. It sends more blood to the brain and it also feeds the brain with substances that develop new nerve connections. If the exercise has complicated (not simple) movements like dance steps or basketball moves, the brain produces even more nerve connections. The more connections, the better the brain can process all kinds of information.

Scientists still don't fully understand the relationship between exercise and brain power. For the moment, people just have to trust that exercise is helping them to learn or remember many things. Scientific research clearly shows, however, that three or more workouts a week, especially in clubs, are good for you and help you live longer. So be active.
