Tigers once lived in different parts of the world, from Africa to Asia, from icy cold mountains and forests to hot and humid jungles. Unlike(not like) lions, leopards and cheetahs, tigers prefer to live in densely covered land where they can hide in tall grasses.

Most tigers are killed, first because humans need their land. Second, because of their skin (coat) and, finally, for some Chinese medicines.

If these activities continue, the wild tigers may die out. And in the future, we can see them only in stories, films and natural museums.
