G. Read the following text and answer the questions.

I love travelling, but I didn't like travelling before. In my first year of university, I started to travel during the holidays. During the New Years' holidays, I went to Paris, and during the summer vacation, I visited Athens and some cities in Italy – I was very happy because it was the first time I had travelled abroad with my friends. I soon understood how important it was to travel. On my travels I experienced new cultures through the art, history, language and food. I also had the chance to meet people who looked at life differently.

Travelling is a learning experience for both oneself and also the people you meet. Some people I met during my trips had never heard of the attractions of Iran and it was great to share my information about Iran with them. When you travel, you will meet people who have different cultural backgrounds and therefore, you will learn about other people's lives, such as their traditions, dress, and food.

This is how I understood that travel helps you understand home more. When you travel, you experience a different place, a different language and a different way of living. All these make you understand your own home better. Not just the physical location of home, but also your way of life and your look on life.

Travelling is truly a valuable experience and I am always interested in learning new things during my trips.
