When a child is born, he cannot speak. The only way he can communicate with others is making a few kinds of sounds like crying. By crying, he can show his feelings, he can say, "I am hungry, I'm tired,..... ."

But after a few months, the baby knows his world. At this time he's careful about everything around him, especially his parents.

He begins to record what they do, what they say and how they act. He even records his parents' accent, tone of voice, or gestures. Then the baby starts to imitate them; it means that he tries to copy them and act just like them. By imitating his parents, he'll be able to say his first words which are normally very simple. As time passes, the child's speaking skills improves more and more, and when he gets older, he can choose proper words , gestures , and expressions to say exactly what he wants.
